LOCAL THEATRES ARE WELL EQUIPPED

Chief Puller So Declares After a Thorough Inspection-Suggestions Adopted.

"The Richmond theatres are provided

"The Richmond theatres are provided with many exits, and are in good shape, with fine facilities for discharging their guidlences," said Chief Puller to a Times-Dispatch man last night.

"In company with one of my men," the head fire fighter continued, "I made a thorough inspection of both the Academy of Music and the Bijou Theatre, in accordance with the instructions of the Fire Board, and found them both in much better shape than I expected. I made several suggestions in each case, and the management in both instances expressed themselves, as perfectly willing to adopt the suggestions,"

At the Academy the chief suggested that the word "exit" be painted over the various doors, and that panels of ginss be put in the doors leading from the theatre at the sides. He found a reasonable number of exits from each floor, with fire escapes from the gallery. The stage is supplied with a stand-pipe and hose, and a fireman is stationed on the free for the bouse.

audience. The character is not one to appeal strongly to the sympathies of an abutience. In its portrayai the role re-quires the best efforts of an actress and arrors ample scope for an artistle achievement, such as was witnessed just nenterement, such as was withesecounts might.

If there is little satisfaction to be derived from the play liself, there is a great deal to be nad in the splendid efforts which it calls forth on the part of those enacting it.

"Iris," in her struggle with herself, which ends so hopefully, is made by Miss Harned very human in all the emotions that sway her, and feelings of pity are surred as the audience, seene by scene, watch her as she steadily drifts to her downtail.

watch her is sie steel downrail.

The company was entirely capable, and special mention should be made of the work of Henry Jewett, as Frederick Materia, and J. Harriey Manners, as Croker Harringtin. The latter character was one of the most wholesome in the pay, "Iris" will be presented again to-night,

In addition to the clever book which has been framed for "Alphonse and Gaston," which will be at the Academy to morrow, and the all-star cast which is to interpret the lines and screaming situations, there are live great specialies introduced. These include a big dancing number for twenty people, introducing the very latest Parislan noveity, for which this attraction has the sole rights.

There is an old axiom in the theatrical profession which is that it is suitidal to remove a play from one house to another, no matter how successful it may have been an the first house. Many plays have been an the first house. Many plays have the suiting the first house. Many plays have the suiting the first house. Many plays have the suiting the first house. Many plays have attempted to live down this old aw, thus only one has ever done it, and that is 'The Barl of Pattucket,' which will be seen here at the Academy Friday and Saturday, who saturday matthee, it was originally moduced at the Madison Sturre Theatre nearly a year ago, and during its many weeks there played to "capacity" at every performance.

"The Great White Diamond" was presented twice at the Bijou Theatre yesterday to andlences which were enthusiatte. The play is a new one to this city, but made friends at the outset. As a melodrama it is new and interesting in many respects. There are trilling icscues and sensational climaxes. The management has arranged for a special matthee for to-day and a regular performance to-night.

Stage realism has made amazingly great strides in the past few years. The latest novelty in this line is introduced in the new and successful melodrama, "liears Adrift," which is to be seen at the Bijon for three days, beginning Thursday. There are seenes in "Hertis Adrift," and the production is reported as being one of the heaviest that is being shown in popular houses this season.
